

The impact of global migration on the working conditions of women health workers and on health..

Contributed by

This report from Public Services International documents how the global migration of health workers is adversely affecting the quality of health care delivery and the employment conditions of women health workers. It outlines the findings of research that was carried out among women health workers in 13 different countries; these include both sending countries, from which health workers are migrating, and the receiving countries which are their destination. The report confirms the enormous increase in the levels of

This report from Public Services International documents how the global migration of health workers is adversely affecting the quality of health care delivery and the employment conditions of women health workers. It outlines the findings of research that was carried out among women health workers in 13 different countries; these include both sending countries, from which health workers are migrating, and the receiving countries which are their destination. The report confirms the enormous increase in the levels of

Read more at: <http://www.eldis.org/cf/search/disp/DocDisplay.cfm?Doc=DOC23179&resource=f1glob>.